The secretary then on motion read the articles of association which had been adopted at a previous meeting, and reported, in behalf of the committee which that they had slone so as far as theta time would admit; that they had been very successful, nearly all having joined who had been seen; that there were a few who would doubtless be glad to join who had not yet had the opportunity.

Quite a number then stepped forward and signed the articles of association. The committee on nominations then made their report, prefaced with the statement that the names contained in it were merely selections of suitable persons for the several positions, but that there was others equally qualified, and it was hoped that if any one had any different name to offer for any place that they would do so.
